d. Place frame, rope, ground post and 2 ground stakes in orange mesh bag and you are done.

For the Junior version of this playing game/field that will be used as a miniature game, the same set up applies, except for when the printed mat is used. (Note: small bean bags are used to secure the field instead of ground stakes). When the printed mat is used, all the same rules apply, but it eliminates the set up of the ropes.

Playing the game: The Hitting Plate is placed within the field or on the mat. The button is pressed to release a pitch to the batter who swings upon pressing a button by the player. As few as one player can play or up to any amount one desires. A scoreboard has dials to keep track of runs.

K. CLAIM OR CLAIMS:
What we claim in our invention is:

1. A portable playing field for playing the plastic ball and bat game that can be played indoors or outdoors, and adjusted to accommodate the playing field size, skill levels, age groups, including professional use. The field automatically determines the hit (ie if a single, double, triple or homerun) and the pitch (ie strike or ball). The field is easily portable and stored in an all in one bag that doubles as the strike zone. All parts of the package or product are used for playing the game.

2. A miniature version of the portable plastic ball and bat game is used as a game that can be used on any surface (including a small table) by any age group. It is adjustable to accommodate the playing surface size. It includes a manual button that releases the pitch and another button that swings the bat to hit the pitch. The playing field automatically determines the hit (ie if a single, double, triple or homerun). The scoreboard dial keeps track of runs.
